Student Orientation 2018

Master in Environmental Planning

October 10 – 12, 2018

Overview

On behalf of the Institute for Landscape Architecture and Environmental Planning (ILAUP), the Chair in Environmental and Land Economics invites you to the orientation week for the Master Program in Environmental Planning. The orientation week is a three day program, aiming to introduce all new students to the university, the university campus, and the contents of the Master Program in Environmental Planning. On the first day, you will get an introduction to the Master and the relevant chairs, including

- Prof. Köppel, Environmental Assessment and Planning;
- Prof. Heiland, Landscape Planning and Development;
- Prof. Kleinschmit, Geoinformation for Environmental Planning;
- Prof. Dehnhardt and Prof. Hirschfeld, Environmental and Land Economics.

On the second day you will get familiar with the university campus and its facilities. The last day is dedicated to an excursion. Together with university staff, you get a chance to explore some interesting parts of Berlin, mostly with a direct link to challenges in Environmental Planning. All details can be found in the following program.

Excursion

On our excursion on Friday we will explore urban solutions in environmental planning. We will start at Südgelände, a former marshalling yard, which was converted to a nature park in 1999. Its unique mix of wild nature and industrial features, as well as its underlying planning processes will be explored in an expert walking tour.

After the walking tour you may join us for a stroll over the EUREF Campus, an innovation hub for transformation in energy, mobility and sustainability. The campus is home to industry, public sector and research institutes.
